

The University of Toronto Medical Journal (UTMJ; <http://www.utmj.org>) was established in 1923 and is Canada's oldest student run peer-reviewed medical journal. The UTMJ is open-access online and has a circulation of over 1500 print copies per year. This year, we are celebrating the publication of our 97th volume and are currently inviting submissions for our Fall issue on Personalized Medicine.

In the Fall Issue of the University of Toronto Medical Journal, we will address the important topic of personalized medicine. We believe that this issue will bring forth areas that are worth exploring, including but not limited to the development of targeted therapies, changes in the approach to patient management, the legal, ethical, and regulatory challenges in managing these promising new innovations, as well as the reception of these treatments in the general population. We encourage submissions from students, researchers, and policy makers with various perspectives so that we can present a balanced, objective, and comprehensive discussion on this important and timely topic. We hope that this issue will inform our international readership about current advances and practices in personalized medicine and identify priorities for future research.

We are currently accepting submissions to the following sections of the UTMJ:

- Original Basic, Clinical, or Epidemiological Research
- Perspective Articles and Commentaries
- Reviews
- Medical Education
- Case Reports

The deadline for article submissions is September 16, 2019. Articles can be submitted through our website at www.utmj.org or via email to editors.utmj@utoronto.ca. The UTMJ also accepts submissions on topics outside of the current theme of Personalized Medicine on a rolling basis. An honorarium will be awarded to the top three student submissions in the amounts of $100, $75, and $50.

Thank you for your interest. We look forward to reading your submissions.

Yours sincerely,
